PRU Programmable Custom Search Engines

Previously called Google Custom Search Engines, these search engines allow simultaneous and targeted searches within a collection of websites that are publicly accessible. Examples of uses of customisable search engines are:

- To find PRU's that have or are undertaking research in a particular area.
- To help identify opportunities for cross-working and collaboration.
- To find researchers across PRU websites.

Google only allows searches of up to 10 websites per search engine so two search engines are created:

1) Custom search 1 PRUs 2024-2028 (1)

As these standard search engines are free, there is a limit of 100 results returned per query and advertising could not be disabled.

Tips for searching

- Phrase searching is allowed with quotation marks, e.g. "insert text".
- Focused title searching is allowed by typing allintitle:insert text.
- Can sort your results by date or relevance (top-right hand corner).
