16. Educational aims of the programme

i.e what is the purpose of the programme and general statements about the learning that takes place over the duration of the programme

This programme is intended for students who wish to specialise in the area of Philosophy that deals with issues pertaining to Psychology. All students in the programme will be required to take the following two modules: Philosophy of Psychology and Philosophy of Mind; and they will be required to write a dissertation on a topic in this area. The programme is geared equally to students who already have some training in Philosophy and to those who wish to convert into the field after pursuing another subject at undergraduate level (which may be, but need not be, Psychology). It will enable the former students to consolidate their existing knowledge and to augment it with a close focus on issues in the Philosophy of Psychology. The latter students, alongside their studies in the Philosophy of Psychology, will also be invited to take a special ‘General Philosophy’ module, which will introduce them to key theories and arguments, concepts and terminology, and classic texts from right across the philosophical spectrum. For students of both kinds, the programme will provide a firm foundation for subsequent doctoral research.

17. Educational objectives of the programme/programme outcomes (as relevant to the SEEC Credit Level Descriptors)

The programme provides opportunities for students to develop and demonstrate knowledge and understanding and skills in Philosophy of Psychology and Mind. They will also have the opportunity to study other areas of Philosophy, selected from a broad range of modules, covering all areas of the subject. Those converting in from other subjects at undergraduate level will be strongly encouraged to take ‘General Philosophy’ as one of their options, although this will not be made strictly compulsory.

Knowledge and understanding

The programme provides a knowledge and understanding of the following:

1. Texts, concepts, theories and arguments in philosophy of psychology and philosophy of mind;
2. The systematic, inter-connected nature of philosophy of psychology and philosophy of mind as a whole;
3. Appropriate personal and professional conduct in the context of the discipline.

These are achieved through the following teaching/learning methods and strategies:

1. Students will be taught through lectures, seminars and tutorials, alongside independent study and individual research. Students will also be required to write a dissertation in this area.
2. Up to 40 credits may be earned through a range of options in other areas of philosophy, or taken outside the department;

3. A General Philosophy module, designed specifically for conversion students.

Assessment:
Essays, written examinations, presentations, exercises in symbolic logic, dissertation.

Skills and other attributes

Intellectual skills:

1. Critical awareness to undertake analysis of complex, incomplete or contradictory areas of knowledge communicating the outcome effectively;

The structure of the programme has been informed by the Credit Framework set out in section A4 of the Academic Regulations, Regulations concerning student & General regulations of King's College London (Academic Session 2008-9). Modes of assessment have been selected in accordance with the School of Arts & Humanities Assessment Guidelines for Credit Framework. The award of the degree is in compliance with Appendix 2 of the Academic regulations, section 2.1, which defines a postgraduate taught degree as: "A prescribed programme of study beyond the standard first degree level which assumes the general level of educational competence implicit in the award of a first degree and which extends over a period equivalent to a minimum of one calendar year full-time. This may include programme of study which are 'conversion courses' where graduates in one discipline acquire knowledge and develop a set of skills in another discipline".

180 credits earned through: 1 x 60-credit core dissertation module; 120 credits from optional modules, of which 80 will normally come from the following four modules: 7AAN2061 Philosophy of Mind, 7AAN2062 Philosophy of Mind II: Special Topics, 7AAN2066 Philosophy of Psychology I, 7AAN2067 Philosophy of Psychology II. However, when a student has already taken a module closely comparable to one of these, we reserve the right to waive this expectation in individual cases.

Part time

Year 1

40 to 80 credits (and normally 80). At least 20 credits must come from either 7AAN2061, 7AAN2062, 7AAN2066 or 7AAN2067. If 7AAN4021 General Philosophy is taken at all, it must be taken in Year 1.

Year 2

100 to 140 credits (and normally 100), depending on the number taken in Year 1. These must include 1 x 60-credit core dissertation module. If any of 7AAN2061, 7AAN2062, 7AAN2066 or 7AAN2067 were not taken in Year 1, they will normally be taken in year 2. However, when a student has already taken a module closely comparable to one of these, we reserve the right to waive this expectation in individual cases.

21. Marking criteria

The assessment criteria follow the College's general criteria for the assessment of MA programmes.

22. Particular features of the programme which help to reduce the barriers experienced by disabled students and ensure that the programme is accessible to all students who meet the entry requirements

Structure

We welcome part time applications.

Publicity and programme handbook

These clearly communicate the key skills that will be required during the programme, the content of each module, the intended teaching methods to be used and the module's status (core/compulsory/optional).

Teaching methods

A wide range of teaching methods are utilised (as demonstrated by box 17), including: handouts in alternative formats, electronic resources placed on the website, lecture notes in advance in electronic formats and transcriptions available for outside speakers and films.

Assessment

Advice has been taken from the Equality and Diversity Department to ensure assessment methods do not unfairly discriminate against students with disabilities. The College's Special Examination Arrangements Committee (SEAC) considers requests for adjustments to assessment to take account of learning and/or physical disabilities. Module outlines specify the assessment methods that will be used and explain that SEAC will need to be notified about requests for alternative assessment methods. The form that the alternative assessment will take has been specified for each module in advance.

Feedback

Feedback on the programme is regularly collected from students, including information from students with disabilities about their learning experience. The information collected is used towards the on-going development and improvement of the programme. In particular, it has prompted closer working with ISS to ensure that subject resources are offered in a range of alternative formats wherever possible.
