Graduation ceremonies

Royal Festival Hall

14, 21, 22, 23 & 29 January 2019

A message from the Chair of Council

On behalf of King's College London it is my great pleasure to welcome you to this graduation ceremony and to extend a special welcome to those on whom we will be conferring degrees.

These ceremonies are important occasions in the life of King's and especially significant for all the graduands celebrating their achievements with family and friends. I am delighted that there will be so many supporters here and I know that we are all immensely proud of all those who are graduating today.

King's maintains strong and ever-growing links with its alumni at home and abroad. In the course of my travels, I look forward to meeting many more of those whose lives and careers have been influenced by their education and experiences at this great university.

I offer heartfelt congratulations to all our graduates and, on behalf of everyone at King's, greatly look forward to maintaining an enduring and rewarding association in the future.

The Rt Hon the Lord Geidt
GCB GCVO OBE QSO FKC
Chair of Council

King's College London

King's College London is one of England's oldest and most prestigious universities, founded within the tradition of the Church of England by King George IV and the Duke of Wellington in 1829.

For almost 200 years, our community has been deeply rooted in the belief that learning and research should serve society. We seek to inspire and support those who will rise to the challenge of solving the world's most pressing problems.

When the University of London was established in 1836, King's became one of its two founding colleges. Over time, it has grown and developed through many mergers, including those with Chelsea and Queen Elizabeth Colleges in 1985; with the Institute of Psychiatry in 1997, and with the United Medical and Dental Schools of Guy's and St Thomas' Hospitals in 1998.

These mergers brought institutions with their own distinguished reputations and traditions. The Institute of Psychiatry, Psychology & Neuroscience is closely associated with the South London and Maudsley NHS Trust, which includes the famous Bethlem Hospital dating from the 13th century. The original King's College School of Medicine was founded in 1831, while St Thomas' Hospital dates from the 12th century; medicine has been formally taught there since the 16th century and at Guy's since the early 18th century. The Florence Nightingale Faculty of Nursing, Midwifery & Palliative Care descends directly from the world's first professional school of nursing, founded by Florence Nightingale in 1860.

Since the 1990s King's academics have been involved in the education of the UK Armed Services, and the Defence Studies Department is based in the Joint Services Command and Staff College in Shrivenham, Wiltshire.

King's has enjoyed financial and academic autonomy since 1994, while remaining part of the University of London. Since 2008, it has awarded its own degrees.

King's vision is to make the world a better place. Research that led to the discovery of the structure of DNA; understanding autism and developing life-changing therapies; informing air pollution awareness and policy – these are some of the ways that we are having a transformational impact on society.

We have more than 31,000 students (of whom nearly 12,800 are postgraduates, with 1,000 students enrolled in online masters courses) from 150 countries worldwide, meaning students are part of a truly international community. Our 8,500 members of staff collaborate with students so that they get the most out of their degree. Many academics are also researchers working within and influencing their industries, giving students access to the latest thinking within a contemporary context.

King's is proud of our illustrious alumni. Twelve people from King's and its associated institutions have been awarded the Nobel Prize, including Archbishop Emeritus Desmond Tutu for his role in South Africa's anti-apartheid campaign, and Professor Michael Levitt for his joint work in developing multiscale models for complex chemical systems. Other notable alumni include British sprinter and world-record holder Dina Asher-Smith, biophysicist Rosalind Franklin famous for her work in X-ray spectroscopy, and acclaimed children's writer Sir Michael Morpurgo.

We're proud of our distinguished international reputation in the humanities, law, science, psychiatry, medicine, dentistry, nursing, and the social sciences. Our four Thames-side campuses in central London, and at Denmark Hill, place us at the centre of leading global conversations in policy, government, law, culture, religion, business and medicine. But we're also truly part of the boroughs we live in. We use our expertise to identify challenges affecting our communities and collaborate with them to address local issues, examples which can then be used across the UK and throughout the world.

Today, we seek to define the university of the future.

Reggie

The silver replica of the King's mascot, Reggie the Lion, which is used at university ceremonial events such as degree ceremonies, was presented to King's in 1959 'in appreciation of many happy years' by Robert John Stewart McDowall (1892-1990) who was the King's College London Halliburton Professor of Physiology from 1923 to 1959.

A message from the President & Principal

A very warm welcome to you all to King's January 2019 degree ceremonies.

Today marks a defining moment in the lives of our new graduates. Not only is it the culmination of intense periods of study, it is a day to acknowledge their personal resilience in acquiring a degree and celebrate the exciting futures that await them.

What defines a King's graduate? What makes them stand out from their peers?

Our students are those who answer the call to tackle society's greatest challenges, both today and in the future. They chose a university that prides itself on its service to society, and dedicated their study to asking real-world questions through the lens of research. Although King's has a rich tradition and almost 200 years of history behind it, our graduates are change-makers determined to go into the workforce and push the boundaries of established conventions. They take their in-depth knowledge and apply their critical judgement to forge new ways of thinking. King's takes great pride in the achievements and qualities of our graduates, who set a high standard for the next generation to go above and beyond.

Graduation is a significant moment for our community, providing a valuable insight into how we are fulfilling our commitment to Vision 2029, our strategic roadmap to make the world a better place.

Our graduates form a valuable part of King's, which prides itself on driving a holistic approach to answering the biggest questions of today. They want to make an impactful contribution to society. King's unique location at the heart of London presents a distinctive opportunity for our graduates to draw on the city as a living classroom. A place where they can connect with pioneering organisations and people, work with local communities to identify and address real-world challenges, and a place where they can translate their learnings into tangible solutions that might one day benefit the world beyond King's. At the end of the day, our graduates are the embodiment of the character, wisdom and global thinking needed to succeed in life and have a transformative impact on the world.

It is with great pride that I warmly welcome new graduates into our 188,000-strong alumni network, leaders both at home and abroad. Today, you join a community of trailblazers who have gone on to rewrite the political landscape, transform the media, business and academic industries, and deliver life-changing contributions in the fields of health, law, international aid and the arts.

I send you my very best wishes for the bright future that awaits you and for your continuing relationship with King's. Congratulations, I hope you will all enjoy the ceremony today.

President & Principal

News in brief

Students achieve podium places and personal bests at 2018 European Championships

Past and current students achieved exceptional results at the 2018 European Championships. Alumna Dina Asher-Smith, who studied History at King's, won gold in the 100m, 200m and 4x100m relay, beating her own British record to win the 100m and achieving the joint fastest time in the world for 2018. Not only was Dina the first woman to run the 200m in under 22 seconds in 2018, she also became the first woman in almost thirty years to secure a sprint treble at a major championship. Psychology student Imani-Lara Lansiquot also won gold in the 4x100m relay and finished the 100m final with a personal-best time. Recent Geography graduate Laviai Nielsen won her 400m semi-final with a personal-best time, finishing fourth in the final.

King's leader ranked 7th of the most influential and powerful black people in Britain

Vice President & Vice Principal (International) Professor 'Funmi Olonisakin has ranked 7th on the annual Powerlist, which honours men and women of African and African-Caribbean heritage in Britain who are changing lives. Also acknowledged were significant figures including the Duchess of Sussex Meghan Markle, rapper Stormzy and boxer Anthony Joshua. 'Funmi has been associated with King's for over 25 years. Following her postgraduate study in War Studies, she was the Office of the United Nations Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict. On returning to King's, 'Funmi founded the African Leadership Centre, which supports the next generation of African scholars and analysts to generate cutting-edge research into security and development in Africa. Focused on driving the internationalisation of the university, 'Funmi is facilitating King's work in Africa, including a project in Nigeria to develop the next generation of African leaders to influence positive future change.

World's largest autism grant to improve quality of life

An international consortium academically led by the Institute of Psychiatry, Psychology & Neuroscience at King's has received a 115 million Euro grant to better understand autism. More than 1 in 100 people are autistic, and many struggle with additional health problems such as epilepsy, anxiety and depression that drastically reduce their quality of life. The grant, which is the largest ever to be given for research into neurodevelopmental conditions, will be used to investigate the causes of autism and develop new therapies to help improve the quality of life for autistic people. The grant brings together autistic people and their families, academic institutions, charities and pharmaceutical companies to study autism and address problems that matter the most to autistic people.

Research suggests a link between air pollution and dementia

A recent study has found that air pollution may increase the risk of developing dementia and is one of the first studies to examine links with the neurodegenerative illness. As part of a coalition of London universities working to understand the impact of air quality on quality of life, researchers from King's Environmental Research Group used carefully calculated estimates of air and noise pollution across London to assess potential links with new dementia diagnoses. Drawing on approximately 131,000 anonymised patient health records, academics estimated patients' exposure to air pollution based on their home postcodes. Although the researchers stressed that many factors may be involved in the development of dementia and that the observational study could not establish that air pollution was a direct cause of the disease, they argued that improving air quality in cities should be a public health priority.

Archival records bring new meaning to the theatrical depiction of George III

The Georgian Papers Programme recently hosted two distinguished actors of British stage and screen. Michael Jibson (Hamilton) and Mark Gatiss (The Madness of George III), whose portrayals of King George III have received critical acclaim, recently visited the Royal Library at Windsor Castle to view special selections of the remarkable Georgian documents held by the Royal Archives. Both actors were given an exclusive tour of the archive and came away with a greater insight into the complex character of the monarch they both play on stage. Following Michael and Mark's visits, the Georgian Papers Programme have launched two digital exhibitions linking key moments and themes from both theatrical productions with material from the archive, enabling fans to learn more about the period of history depicted in both shows and making the rich archive accessible to diverse audiences.

Outstanding results for King's Maths School students

The King's College London Mathematics School returned its highest ever A-level maths results for the 2017-18 academic year. For the first time, female A-level students outperformed their male counterparts and secured a higher proportion of top grades across all science, technology, engineering and mathematics (STEM) subjects taught. Students on average performed more than one whole grade better in each subject than predicted by their GCSE performance, placing the school in the top 0.5 per cent of schools in terms of value added.

King's researchers present key findings to the United Nations Security Council

Academics from the International Centre for the Study of Radicalisation (ICSR) recently presented to the United Nations Security Council, sharing new insights into the gender and age of foreign nationals affiliated with Islamic State (IS). The researchers found that the number of foreign women and minors who travelled to Syria and Iraq and became affiliated with IS has been significantly underestimated and under-analysed, with initial estimates suggesting that women and minors make up to 25 per cent of all foreign IS-affiliates. Their report was discussed at the United Nations Security Council briefing in August 2018, and also presented at a joint meeting hosted by the United Nations Counter-Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate (UNCTED) and the UK Mission to the United Nations (New York). Researchers urged the Council to give urgent and immediate attention to understanding and rehabilitating these groups to prevent them from becoming displaced or posing significant international security threats.

Dentists can play a vital role in the detection of eating disorders

New data published in the British Dental Journal could play a significant role in enabling dentists to detect eating disorders, leading to earlier diagnosis and treatment. King's researchers recommended that dentists be aware of the very specific oral indicators of anorexia nervosa and bulimia, as early physical and psychological signs of both conditions can be subtle and difficult to detect. Eating disorders affect an estimated 725,000 people in the UK at a cost of around £15 billion per annum. The report authors believe that the early identification of the signs of the developing conditions, coupled with referrals to GPs, may lead to both better health outcomes for the patient and savings for the NHS.

Increase in probable Post Traumatic Stress Disorder among British military

A recent King's study suggests that the conflicts in Iraq and Afghanistan may have led to an increase in the rate of probable Post Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD) among members of the UK Armed Forces. The research identifies for the first time that the risk of PTSD for veterans deployed in conflicts is substantially higher than for those still serving. Results published in the British Journal of Psychiatry estimate that 6 per cent of current and ex-serving military personnel in 2014-16 had probable PTSD, a figure that has risen by 2 per cent since the period of 2004-6. Senior authors emphasised that more research is needed to explain the rise, but suggest one possible reason PTSD is more common among veterans is that personnel who are mentally unwell are more likely to leave the armed forces.

Art and science collide in the heart of the city

In September 2018, Science Gallery London opened its new permanent home on Guy's campus. The first of its kind in the UK, the gallery is a flagship project for the university and presents an opportunity to explore issues of global significance in creative ways. Through innovative installations, unique exhibitions and a diverse events programme designed for and with young people, contemporary King's research is considered through the lens of science and art. The student body and young people who study, live and work in the neighbouring boroughs of Lambeth and Southwark play a key role in the gallery's direction, which will collaborate with researchers, artists and scientists to shape each season.

Introducing solids earlier may help babies sleep for longer

A study by King's and St George's, University of London has found that babies introduced to solid foods early slept longer and woke less frequently compared with infants who were exclusively breastfed. The report mentioned that maternal wellbeing was also positively affected by introducing solids earlier. Although the current advice is that mothers should try to exclusively breastfeed until around six months of age, 75 per cent of British mothers introduce solids before five months, believing that it reduces the number of times infants wake throughout the night.

Programme

Procession

The organ will play and the company is requested to rise while the procession enters the Hall and remain standing until the Chair of Council is seated. The procession has 12 categories: in those with plural components the procession will comprise those able to be present and will not necessarily constitute full membership.

Academic dress

Until 2008 King's graduates wore the academic dress of the University of London which, like all academic dress, is based on mediaeval costume. Graduates of the University of London have been formally presented to the Chancellor of the University since 1849, and the first public presentation ceremony of the University was held in King's Great Hall in 1850. From 1903 to 1992 this University ceremony was continued in the Royal Albert Hall, and King's first held its own ceremony in 1989. In 1995, the University of London granted its constituent colleges the power to confer degrees on behalf of the University. In 2007, in line with the evolution of the University of London into a federation of colleges each awarding their own degrees, King's successfully petitioned the Privy Council to be granted degree-awarding powers in its own right. These powers were first used in 2008.

One of the more noticeable impacts of securing its own degree-awarding powers was the need for King's to design its own academic dress, and we are most grateful to Dame Vivienne Westwood for the major role she played in the design and also to Ede & Ravenscroft for their expertise in the production of the academic dress. The new gowns and hoods have colours which reflect King's faculties and levels of degree, and a unique feature of the gowns is the King's lion button on each shoulder.

The various officers of King's wear their official robes, and members of the academic staff wear the academic dress of the university from which they graduated, which includes that of other universities in Britain and around the world.

Undergraduate, first degree and master's level graduates wear a black gown, and a black hood attached to the gown on each shoulder with a King's lion button. The hood is bound with the faculty colour, with the binding extending over the shoulders. For master's level graduates the sleeve vents of the gown and the cape of the hood are also bound in the school colour.

Master of Philosophy (MPhil) graduates wear a black gown, and a black hood attached to the gown on each shoulder with a King's lion button. The sleeve vents, cape and cowl are bound in blue with the binding extending over the shoulders.

Research degree (PhD/MD(Res)) graduates wear a dark red gown, and a dark red hood attached to the gown on each shoulder with a King's lion button. The sleeve vents, cape and cowl are bound in blue with the binding extending over the shoulders.

Specialist doctors (EdD/DClinPsy/DHC/DrPS/DThMin) graduates wear a blue gown, and a blue hood attached to the gown on each shoulder with a King's lion button. The sleeve vents, cape and cowl are bound in dark red with the binding extending over the shoulders.

Graduates who have completed the Associateship of King's College also wear an epitoge, embroidered with the King's lion 'Reggie', buttoned to the left shoulder. The AKC is King's original qualification, first awarded in 1835. It provides an opportunity to think about fundamental questions of theology, philosophy and ethics in a contemporary context, alongside degree studies.

Congratulations class of 2019 – welcome to your global alumni community

As you embark on your career or further study, the alumni team is here to support you through a variety of opportunities and benefits. To share these with you we need your contact information and consent!

Don't miss out! Update your contact details with us online, over the phone, or via email. Come chat with us at the Alumni Stand, pick up your King's pin badge and learn about the benefits of staying connected with King's.

You can contact the Alumni Office on forever@kcl.ac.uk or +44 (0) 20 7848 3053 and, of course, you can visit the alumni website at www.alumni.kcl.ac.uk. For information on how we will use your details please see our privacy policy: alumni.kcl.ac.uk/privacy-statement

Some of the benefits you can look forward to include:

Alumni events

The alumni team organises a variety of events, from panel sessions on topical subjects to webinars featuring practical advice. Whether you want to learn how to get your new job, hear the latest on Brexit from King's experts, or just need an excuse to meet with old friends, there's an event for you in our busy, year-round schedule.

Global Networking opportunities

We host networking events all over the world, so you can reconnect and meet new friends. Twice a year we travel out to the US and Asia Pacific to host events and share updates from King's. More events are being added all the time, organised by the alumni team and our vibrant international alumni committees. Recently, events have taken place in Mexico, Canada, Indonesia, Spain and Belgium!

King's Connect Mentoring

This programme will connect you with fellow King's alumni and students across the world! When you join King's Connect, you will receive access to an online mentoring platform where you can make connections and develop your network. As a mentee, you can receive professional advice, guidance and insights from other members. If you choose to become a mentor, you can also share your professional knowledge, experiences and insights with other members. You will also receive bespoke mentoring-themed newsletters, and will be invited to exclusive mentoring-themed events.

Leadership Mentoring Programme

Each year approximately 100 students and alumni participate in the Leadership Mentoring Programme. This bespoke programme hand-matches King's students and recent graduates with alumni mentors, to provide tailored support and advice that will help them achieve their goals during their studies and as they enter the world of work.

Access to King's, libraries and online journals

Sign up for an alumni library card and get lifetime membership for all five campus libraries. You can register for exclusive alumni access to online academic journals, such as JSTOR. You can also continue to use the Fitness Centres at a discount with an Alumni Membership. For a full list of alumni benefits and discounts please visit www.alumni.kcl.ac.uk.

From the Chair of the King's College London Alumni Association (KCLA)

On behalf of our Alumni Association (KCLA), I would like to congratulate you today and welcome you to the King's alumni community. I know this is a very proud day for you and your families as you leave King's with your King's degree, a qualification which gives you a great start on the next part of your life's journey. Staying in touch with King's will help you build on the benefits you have already gained as well as being an enjoyable and very fulfilling experience as you embark on your careers or further study.

The Alumni Association represents all alumni in the affairs of King's and works very closely with the University's Alumni Office to ensure that alumni stay in touch and get to experience all that is on offer for life after King's. This includes cultural, sporting and academic activities that we would like alumni to continue to participate in. Our alumni Council organises a series of events; lectures, dinners and debates drawing on the strengths of the cosmopolitan community that is King's.

The KCLA are keen to ensure that alumni stay involved with King's after graduation and we encourage you to stay in touch.

BUCKINGHAM PALACE

As Chancellor of the University of London, I am delighted to send my good wishes to all those being presented at today's Ceremony, and my congratulations on your achievements.

The time that you have spent at the University, both in study and leisure, will have given you much of the knowledge and many of the skills that you will need for your future life and career. I hope that you have enjoyed all aspects of your University experience and that the strong and lasting friendships you have made will bring great pleasure in the years to come.

In addition, I send my good wishes to all those who have encouraged and supported you during your studies, confident that they too will enjoy this special day.
