

RESEARCH PROJECT

Project name: Unsettling Healthcare

Description: The Unsettling Healthcare initiative is a social and political science collaboration led by Professor Susan Fairley Murray that examines emergent trends in the global healthcare economy from a social justice perspective. We aim to critically examine the changing profile of healthcare financing, provision and consumption, with a particular emphasis on the challenges faced in middle-income countries.

Principle investigators: Professor Susan Fairley Murray

Investigators: Professor Ramila Bisht (Jawaharlal Nehru University); Dr Ben Hunter (King's College London); Dr Volkan Yilmaz (Bogazici University); Dr Abhay Shukla (SATHI-Pune India); and Dr Indira Chakravarthi (SATHI-Pune)

Aims: to critically examine the changing profile of healthcare financing, provision and consumption, with a particular emphasis on the challenges faced in middle-income countries.

Partners: researchers, health activists and policy makers interested in promoting equity and inclusion in healthcare systems.
