I first became interested in law because my grandfather graduated with a law degree but never had the opportunity to apply this learning. I may also have watched too many episodes of LA Law as a teenager. I enjoy logical and analytical reasoning and was curious to know the ways in which society was regulated through legal rules. It’s extremely rewarding to be able to teach and supervise bright, able and engaged students and to be in an environment that enables me to pursue my research interests in the field of intellectual property law.