In this book, James Reilly examines the ideas and institutions at the heart of China's approach to economic statecraft, and assesses Beijing's orchestration in four cases: Myanmar, North Korea, Western Europe, and Central/Eastern Europe. China's unique experience as a planned economy, and then a developmental state, all under a single Leninist party, left Chinese leaders with unchallenged authority over their economy. However, despite successfully mobilizing companies, banks, and local officials to rapidly expand trade and investment abroad, Chinese leaders largely failed to influence key policy decisions overseas. For countries around the world, economic engagement with China thus yields more benefits with fewer costs than generally assumed.

FEATURES

- First extensive study of Chinese domestic processes and strategic thinking on economic statecraft
- Develops a new conceptual framework for China's economic statecraft: orchestration
- Utilizes extensive field research to assess the impact and effectiveness of China's economic statecraft across a diverse set of strategically important countries in Europe and Asia
- Lays the foundation for a new research field: comparative economic statecraft

James Reilly is an Associate Professor in the Department of Government and International Relations at the University of Sydney.
