Notes:

- Students must obtain agreement from both potential supervisors prior to submitting an application.
- Supervisors should be aware of, and agree with, the student's proposed schedule of study and research prior to the student beginning their programme.
- Students are required to spend specified amounts of time in each institution. This varies depending on the partner institution. Students should refer to, and ensure that their travel plan complies with, the following:
King's-University of Hong Kong (HKU): Students should spend the equivalent of 50% of their time at each university.

King's-Humboldt University, Berlin: Students must spend a minimum of one year and a maximum of two years at the partner university.

King's-National University of Singapore (NUS): Students must spend a minimum of one year and a maximum of two years at the partner university.

King's-University of Sao Paulo (USP): Students must spend a minimum of one year and a maximum of two years at the partner university.

King's-Technische Universitat Dresden (TUD): Students will normally be required to spend approximately 12 months at the partner university.

King's-University of Pretoria: Students must spend a minimum of one year and a maximum of two years at the partner university.

King's-Pontifical Catholic University of Chile (UC): Students must spend a minimum of one year and a maximum of two years at the partner university.

- Students will usually begin their candidature at their home university and must spend the final six months before completion at the home university.
- Any changes to the travel plan must be agreed with both supervisors and referred to the Joint Academic Committee (via the Centre for Doctoral Studies for the first three partnerships mentioned above) for approval. Changes that result in a student not meeting the above minimum requirements for periods of candidature may result in the student receiving a single PhD, awarded solely by the home institution.
