This new edition of Seapower maintains the standards of its predecessors as the standard work on contemporary maritime strategy. Everyone who wishes to remain up to date in the subject must read it.

– Eric Grove, University of Hull, UK

Reviews of previous editions:

‘A powerful combination of plain English and an innate ability to break down the component parts of a complex subject into a readily digestible form before leading the reader gently through the ensuing maze.’

– The Naval Review

‘A definitive study of the role of seapower, past, present and future.’ – Parliamentary Maritime Review

This is the third, revised and fully updated edition of Geoffrey Till’s Seapower.

The rise of the Chinese and other Asian navies, worsening quarrels over maritime jurisdiction, and the United States’ maritime pivot towards the Asia-Pacific region remind us that the sea has always been central to human development as a source of resources, and as a means of transportation, information-exchange and strategic dominance. It has provided the basis for mankind’s prosperity and security, and this is even more true in the early twenty-first century, with the emergence of an increasingly globalised world trading system. Navies have always provided a way of policing, and sometimes exploiting, the system. In contemporary conditions, navies and other forms of maritime power are having to adapt, in order to exert the maximum power ashore in the company of others and to expand the range of their interests, activities and responsibilities. While these new tasks are developing fast, traditional ones still predominate. Deterrence remains the first duty of today’s navies, backed up by the need to ‘fight and win’ if necessary. How navies and their states balance these two imperatives will tell us a great deal about our future in this increasingly maritime century.

Written by a recognised authority on maritime strategy past and present, this book investigates the consequences of this for the developing nature, composition and functions of all the world’s significant navies, and provides a guide for anyone interested in the changing and crucial role of seapower in the twenty-first century.

Seapower is essential reading for all students of naval power, maritime security and naval history, and is highly recommended for students of strategic studies, international security and international relations.

Geoffrey Till is a recognised authority on maritime strategy. Formerly Dean of Academic Studies at the UK Joint Services Command and Staff College, he is currently Professor of Maritime Studies in the Defence Studies Department and Director of the Corbett Centre for Maritime Policy, King’s College London. He is author of a number of books including Air Power and the Royal Navy, Maritime Strategy and the Nuclear Age and, most recently, The Development of British Naval Thinking (also published by Routledge).
War, Peace and International Relations
An introduction to strategic history, 2nd Edition
By Colin Gray

War, Peace and International Relations provides an introduction to the strategic history of the past two centuries, showing how those 200 years were shaped and reshaped extensively by war. The book takes a broad view of what was relevant to the causes, courses, and consequences of wars. Written by leading strategist Professor Colin Gray, the book provides students with a good grounding in the contribution of war to the development of the modern world, from the pre-industrial era to the age of international terrorism and smart weapons.

Modern Military Strategy
An Introduction
By Elinor C. Sloan

This textbook provides a coherent introduction to post-Cold War and post-9/11 military theory for upper-level students seeking an initial understanding of strategic studies. Chapters cover the conduct of war in each of the naval, land, air, space and cyber dimensions, nuclear strategy, and irregular war and counterinsurgency. The text concludes by identifying crosscutting trends, statements, and principles which may form the basis of a modern, general theory of war.
