Our online International Corporate and Commercial Law course will give you access to the world-renowned teaching of King’s College London wherever you are. Drawing on the most advanced thinking from leading experts, you will learn how to analyse and solve problems, and practice corporate and commercial law across multiple jurisdictions and legal systems.

Key benefits
- The Dickson Poon School of Law at King’s College London is recognised globally as one of the best law schools in the world. It ranks top in the Research Excellence Framework (2014) and ninth in the UK (Complete University Guide, Law 2019).
- As the course is taught online, you are able to fit learning in around your other commitments; thereby allowing you maximum flexibility.
- We have strong connections with some of the world’s leading law firms and international employers.
- The School has pioneered a transnational legal perspective in legal research and teaching and has an international reputation for excellence in this area.

Course details
Our International Corporate and Commercial Law course is based on the view that an understanding of corporate and commercial law is inseparable from an understanding of the economic context in which it operates. Practicing law in the corporate and commercial environment demands highly specialised knowledge, and strong analytical and critical skills, along with a truly global perspective.

On completion of the course, you will be able to demonstrate knowledge and understanding of key areas of corporate and commercial law, as well as an ability to analyse, and critically assess the state of the law in these areas. You will also be able to apply the law to a wide variety of practical settings and show an understanding of the relationship between the law and the commercial contexts in which it applies. Equally important, you will be able to demonstrate originality in the application of knowledge, a critical awareness of current problems, and new insights into specific areas covered on the course.
Teaching
Learning and teaching methods vary but may include watching video content, engaging in discussion forums, taking part in live chat/webinar sessions, self-directed activities, doing quizzes or working through interactive content designed to stimulate your thoughts and help you to apply knowledge.

The following table will give you an idea of what a typical academic week might look like.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Directed Study per week</th>
<th>Other activity per week</th>
<th>Self-directed Learning and assessment work</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>2 hours (web content material including recorded video, text, graphics)</td>
<td>2 hours (1-hour live seminar and 1 hour of discussion board)</td>
<td>16 hours (including completing set tasks and reading, research, revision)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Assessment
Each module will be assessed in two ways. A small percentage of your final module mark will be based on your participation in discussion forums, unless stated otherwise. The remaining percentage will be assessed through either a take-home exam or an essay.

Typically, one credit equates to 10 hours of work.

The study time and assessment methods detailed above are typical and give you a good indication of what to expect. However, they may change if the course modules change.
