Welcome to King's College London

If you want to make a difference and help shape the world in which we live, King’s is the university for you.

Ranked equal 19th in the world* and located in one of the world’s greatest cities, King’s is where you can realise your full potential.

As a student at King’s, you will become part of our diverse community in the heart of London, where you will join a highly talented group of over 26,500 students from more than 150 countries worldwide.

As London’s most central university, you will be ideally placed to benefit from everything that this vibrant city has to offer, thanks to our strong relationships with London’s key cultural, political, legal and health institutions.

I hope you enjoy exploring all that our university has to offer and that you will choose to make King’s your next destination for 2017.

Founded in 1829

King’s College London prides itself on being at the forefront of higher education.

King’s is among the top seven universities in the United Kingdom for research earnings and has been rated excellent by the Quality Assurance Agency for students’ educational experience.

For research impact, King’s ranked 4th in the UK amongst multi-faculty universities in the Research Excellence Framework 2014, confirming the university’s position as world-leading.

Leading the way in discovery and innovation

The excellence of our research has led to groundbreaking new discoveries and underpins all of King’s teaching.

Cutting-edge results for today’s problems:

• Leading the study into homegrown terrorism.
• Trialing stem cells to repair and renew brain tissue damaged by stroke.
• Developing technology to diagnose autism in 15 minutes using a brain scan.
• Addressing the science, technology and application of big data from expert perspectives.

Long-established

When the University of London was established in 1836, King’s became one of its two founding colleges.

King’s consistently strives for excellence

England’s 4th oldest university

Connecting with London and the world

King’s has links with a magnitude of international institutions located in London across the arts, sciences, politics, law and medicine.

As London’s most central university King’s has four campuses by the River Thames between Westminster and the City and one in south London. This central location allows students to take full advantage of having a front row seat in one of the world’s most connected and dynamic cities.

Current King’s partners include: The British Library, British Museum, National Gallery, Guy’s & St Thomas’ NHS Foundation Trusts, Southbank Centre, Cancer Research UK, British Heart Foundation and many more.

Engaging with King’s cosmopolitan community

King’s connects with people and organisations throughout London and across the globe – from government, business and industry to charities, sport and culture.

King’s works with over 160 partner universities and institutions worldwide to deliver programmes that draw upon world renowned academics.

As a student at King’s you will join a diverse and cosmopolitan community of over 26,000 students and 6,000 staff from over 150 countries.

You will also benefit from an award-winning Students’ Union with a choice of over 250 student-led sports clubs, societies and activity groups.

Joint programmes, student and staff exchanges and research collaborations are among the many advantages of our partnerships with other leading universities.

Making your mark

When you graduate from King’s you become part of a distinguished network of alumni dating back to the foundation of the university.

The staff and alumni of King’s and its constituent institutions made major contributions to 19th-century science, medicine and public life.

In the 20th century nine King’s alumni were awarded the Nobel Prize, with a further three since 2010.

Dr Oliver Johnson studied Medicine at King’s. He is now Programme Director of the King’s Sierra Leone Partnership and working on the frontline in the fight against the Ebola virus.

To date, King’s alumni network exceeds 40,000 people from 172 different countries and our alumni, staff and students continue to make headlines today with discoveries, inventions and distinctions.

Deborah Bull CBE, Director of Cultural Partnerships, joined King’s in 2012 following a long and successful career in the arts. She was named in the Evening Standard’s 2014 list of “The 1,000 most influential Londoners” as a science innovator.
